Government announces additional mental health supports for COVID-19 on the way

April 9, 2020

To ensure British Columbians have increased access to vital mental health supports during the COVID-19 pandemic, the Province has announced $5 million to expand existing mental health programs and services and launch new services to support British Columbians.

“If you are feeling anxious, stressed, depressed or disconnected because of COVID-19, I want you to know that you are not alone,” said Premier John Horgan. “Our government is working to give you more options for mental health support as we all stay home to prevent the spread of this virus.”

HSA members work at the Canadian Mental Health Association and The Foundry, where these important mental health services will be delivered.
