Talking Politics: How to get women more involved in municipal politics

October 3, 2007

Members in the Lower Mainland interested in getting women involved in municipal politics are welcome to attend the latest in the Talking Politics series.

Thursday, October 11 hear from Sue Hammell, MLA, who will speak about international examples. Menna Wong will focus on how to involve all communities. Loretta Woodcock will talk about her experience as a Vancouver Parks Board member, and Sharon Gregson will share her perspectives as a school board member.

Chaired by Ellen Woodsworth, former Vancouver councillor, the event will be held Thursday, October 11 at 7 p.m. at the Rhizome Cafe, 317 East Broadway.
