Community social services: Bargaining underway

February 25, 2013

There has been some progress at the bargaining table over the last week, and discussions continued through the weekend.

The community social services bargaining committee hopes to reach a fair and reasonable agreement, including a wage increase. Your multi-union bargaining committee remains focused on the issues that were identified as priorities by our members.

HSA will continue to provide updates once bargaining concludes.

BCGEU, HSA, CUPE, HEU, and six other unions, which together make up the Community Social Services Bargaining Association, represent community social service workers in British Columbia. There are 15,000 unionized community social service workers.
