BC's largest social justice film festival underway Feb. 28

February 24, 2014

The Just Film Festival brings the pursuit of justice to the big screen, featuring social justice and environmental documentaries that go to the heart of issues confronting communities here and around the planet. The focus of the festival is to motivate audiences to action by focusing on issues both local and global. It runs February 28 - March 2 at Langara College and is BC's largest social justice film festival.

The festival is supported by, among other groups, CoDevelopment Canada, a long time beneficiary of HSA's Committee on Equality and Social Action's solidarity fund.
